I'm trying to perform image processing with C# in Visual Studio 2008, and I'm stuck with sharp edges. When I apply a GaussianBlur on the black rectangle, the sharp edges get blurred: When I apply the following filter on the black rectangle: `Image newImage = (Image)image; newImage.ApplyGaussianBlur(new Gray(), 50, 0.2f); newImage.ApplyGaussianBlur(new Gray(), 50, 0.2f);` The resulting image has blurred edges: But how can I preserve the sharp edges (like the first image)? A: The problem is that the GaussianBlur algorithm takes into account the distance between pixels, and the pixels on your black rectangle are too close. There are two solutions, but the first one is the best: use a BlurStyle. A: After playing around with the blur effect a bit I came up with this solution: `Image newImage = (Image)image; newImage.ApplyGaussianBlur(new Gray(), 50, 0.2f, 0.0f); newImage.ApplyGaussian 1d6a3396d6`
