Read More at number of people living in poverty has been on the rise since 2000, leaving the percentage of the population living in poverty to hit 17.5%, up from 14.3% in 2000. Research has shown that the gap between rich and poor is increasing, the vast majority of those who are living in poverty are children, elderly or disabled persons. There has also been a shift in the distribution of the poverty line over the past several decades, with an estimated one-fifth of the total population having fallen below the line. It's not a new idea. The so-called "regional kitchen" is pretty standard in this part of the country. Though there are some local variations on the theme, like the awesome hibachi grill in the above pic, it's most often seen in the form of a small, free standing range. These are very common, and range from no more than a handful of seats to full sized ranges that can seat anywhere from 10 to 20. Back then, I was first introduced to the kitchen with a small 10-seat range from a gas company rep. It was a good way to learn how things work, and they were a great company to deal with. When I went to work in the North, we started our first gas lines at the same time. So it was only natural that I learned how to work on the small-to-medium sized kitchen ranges. I came to realize that these kitchens were rather poorly-designed on a number of levels. Not only were they typically loaded with high-priced, old-fashioned radiators, they tended to feature small appliances that were either too small for their space or too bulky for their use. You'd hear plenty of stories of range fires, faucet freezes, and so on, but even worse, there was no design level to the operation of the kitchen. So, in my spare time, I've taken to hacking up some of the ugly old ones into something better. The first range I built was the
