ICMP tunneling allows the communication between two workstations using data transfer mechanisms that are based on echo requests and reply packets. Such connections can be used to obtain encrypted communication channels between machines or to bypass firewall rules. With a lightweight footprint and no installation required, TCP Over ICMP Tunnel is a simple software utility that allows users to put ICMP tunneling into place without too much hassle. The main window is simple, displaying a form to fill in the address of the proxy server and the port number to use. The client listens for incoming packets via a user-defined port number as well. Aside from these basic mandatory settings, TCP Over ICMP Tunnel also features data logging, enabling users to get relevant information regarding exchanged packets in a structured manner. The log is also displayed within the main window, provided the corresponding box is ticked. TCP Over ICMP Tunnel allows the client workstation to exchange data to the target proxy server via the ICMP protocol only, all without affecting the functionality of the applications running on the client machine. To ease users' work, the application enables them to save the configuration locally and load it whenever needed.

Minister for Finance Michael Noonan is to confirm that there is a reduction in Irish debt and that the Government has put a line in the sand on the renegeing of EU obligations. That was the message in Mr Noonan's speech to the joint sitting of the Houses of the Oireachtas on Thursday afternoon, when he told TDs and Senators that the Government is in a good position. He said his Government has put a line in the sand, although it has not made public what that line is. Mr Noonan said the Government is protected from any major challenges in the immediate future. He said it is very important that this future is not threatened by uncertainty about the EU. He said the Government is at its best when it can govern, and his attention will be focused on those areas. It was a major speech from Mr Noonan at the point when he is under pressure in Europe to do something more. His statement on Thursday afternoon was made to the last of a series of votes on the Government's programme for Government. He had emphasised what his priorities for 09e8f5149f

TCP Over ICMP Tunnel

Allows users to open a TCP/IP tunnel via the ICMP protocol for packet transfer between any two machines within the same local network. Start the application and define the ICMP port number and the ICMP proxy server address on the system to which the tunnel will be opened. The source and the target machine must be in the same local network and able to communicate with the selected proxy server. ICMP tunneling can be used in several ways: - Bypassing firewall rules on the target system. - Bypassing firewall rules on the source system, allowing users to log into the proxy server. - Setting up encrypted communication channels for a direct connection between both computers. - Bypassing proxy servers to stream media through. - Simple configuration. - Remote control. Requirements: - ICMP Tunnel Processor is required. Download it here: - The server must be in the same local network as the one where the client is running. - Support for UDP protocol in the ICMP Tunnel Processor is required. - Logging of packets is enabled within the software.

Q: Compiler "error: expected expression" with `thread_local` This makes no sense to me. Simple program. Thread-safe, according to C++11 standard.

template struct Cache { T t; Cache(T t) : t(std::thread_local::create([] { return std::move(t); })) { assert(!t.expired()); } }; int main() { Cache c1(1); Cache c2(2); }

 Compiler under GCC version 6.3 emits this error: `error: expected expression return std::thread_local::create([] { return std::move(t); } ^` This is most weird. I even tried to google this error, since no one (but me) understands such an error.
