I have it running on my Win7 x64 laptop (I have tried both 32 and 64 bits of Windows). I have a pretty large channel lineup that includes over 300 channels. The Sling Media server allows me to watch my channels, when the AverTV is on and I am not watching the local channels or live streaming on Netflix, Hulu or Amazon. That's pretty awesome. The one thing I don't like is that the Sling Media server is configured to download all the channels every night. It can take up to 30 minutes to set up the channel lineup, scan the schedule and then download it. However, it does download the schedule directly to the web server that I have on my Win 7 laptop. I just copy the schedule over to my AverTV, and it runs like clockwork. But, I haven't tried it on my tablet. And I think that I could use an Sling Media server for a remote access device on my Xbox or Wii U, for me to watch movies and other content on my big-screen TV, but I've never tried it. I would use the iPad or phone for that. That would be awesome. Just my.02 My and the
