MiniMIPS Sim and its assembler, mipssim, are based on the architecture described in Digital Design and Computer Architecture by Harris and Harris. The designers of MiniMIPS have recreated their architecture in the simulator. Using the architecture and an actual MIPS chip for input, we have made sure all the instructions and registers of the actual chip are used when simulating. The instructions, and their low and high ports, are available for selection. The registers are available for redefinition for the programmer. The architecture is extended to include peripheral configuration registers and external access ports. A JTAG interface allows you to debug the simulator, and the chip that the simulator is simulating. Features: Single cycle machine with 16-bit instruction word and 8-bit registers All supported instructions Over a hundred interrupt handlers Programmer designed interrupt handler that loops until condition is true. User can redefine the external access ports. All supported external access ports. Int and Ext user port Synchronize user port Chip select and data select provided Synchronous serial port for debugging Support for MIPS Chip QuickTime Producer Version 7.5 QuickTime 6 is an application that provides the computer user with the ability to edit, play and record video, audio and image files produced by Apple Computer's QuickTime components, QuickTime Player and QuickTime Pro. QuickTime Producer 7.5 is an update to the QuickTime Producer application for creating movies, broadcast media, digital books, and PC games that make use of QuickTime technology. Movie chapters, slideshows, dvd menus, and Special Properties can be added to QuickTime files. QuickTime Producer 7.5 introduces a quicktime-to-avi converter that allows you to create a sequence of QuickTime files and then compress and convert them to avi files without re-editing or re-recording. QuickTime Producer 7.5 also introduces a quicktime-to-dvd burner that converts QuickTime to DVD files.
