Enjoy!The invention relates to a device for producing a flow in which a liquid such as fuel is pumped by a pump arranged in a suction pipe. The flow is separated from the pump suction pipe by a valve arranged on the suction side. The device comprises a delivery pipe which is connected to the delivery side of the pump and in which the flow is located in a partial area of the delivery pipe, whereby the partial area is delimited by a valve on the delivery side. In known devices of this type the valves are actuated by an actuator, by which the valve can be moved into its opened and closed position. For safety reasons it is necessary to prevent that an actuator malfunctions in such a way that the valve remains in the closed position. For this reason it is necessary that the actuator and the valve can not be actuated in the same way. However, because it is necessary to keep a certain distance between the pump and the actuator, this distance requires that at least a portion of the suction pipe is located outside the immediate vicinity of the pump.
