CHICAGO — A Chicago Public Schools parent has been arrested for child porn charges after allegedly posting sexually graphic photos of a 2-year-old girl on the social media app Snapchat. The indictment returned on Monday charged 7-year-old victim's mother, XXXXXX XXXXX, who is the alleged perpetrator of the child porn scam. According to prosecutors, the child pornography scam began on Jan. 13 when an undercover officer received an anonymous email containing a Snapchat link to the suspect's profile. The profile included a picture of the suspect holding the girl's feet. The officer sent a screenshot of the profile to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children and "information was obtained from the National Center to identify the child," according to the indictment. Authorities later identified the suspect as XXXXX XXXXX, who goes by the name "Daddy B." Prosecutors allege the suspect "created an Instagram profile" under the name "Daddy B" in which he shared sexually graphic photos of the child with a captions saying "better than sleeping with yours truly." According to the indictment, investigators received the Instagram and Snapchat messages on Jan. 16 and "were able to recover several explicit images of the child on the Snapchat account." The images, which include the subject touching herself, "had the time of the Snapchat posted as '1:43 p.m.'" The child appears to be about 2 years old and is wearing a blue top with two red hearts on the front and a red skirt. A CPS spokesperson said on Tuesday that the family is cooperating with authorities and is not facing any disciplinary action related to the alleged activity. The arrest followed an investigation by investigators with the Chicago Police Department's Major Crimes Unit. "It's a shocking example of what sexual predators do to innocent children, and my office will continue to use all of the tools at our disposal to ensure that predators are brought to justice," Cook County State's Attorney Kim Foxx said. "Parents need to be aware that predators may use any means to get to their children. They must keep their children safe and

Q: Django Migrations on production server, no init file. "../manage.py" is incorrect I am on a Mac, using a virtualenv. I ran into a problem where I believe the migrations were not initializing on the server. I was getting the error: ImportError: No module named django.core.management The virtualenv is set to the default, with PIP. That default virtualenv has Django installed. However, this doesn't work for some reason, so I created a new virtualenv. I tried the following in my new virtualenv: python manage.py migrate This prints out the message that the migrations are already in a state that they can't be migrated. But it does not create a new init file. I am wondering what to do about this because I want to use the migrations command. Any suggestions? A: Use -h or --help to see what it's looking for. It looks like it's trying to find one of these things: Create a migrate/__init__.py file Create a manage.py file in your app's root Create a manage.py file in your app's root and populate it with import statements. If you are using manage.py to handle migrations (in your apps root) then you need to have a migrate/__init__.py file where it can import from. If you aren't using manage.py, then you should create a manage.py and put some import statements in it. These are the correct commands for a working manage.py: $ python manage.py help $ python manage.py shell Use the -h or --help command to see what you can do. RBC were wondering last week if there was any chance of this happening with the Toronto Blue Jays. The Jays — with the baseball equivalent of a full season in front of them in the first round of the playoffs — are not known for taking anything easy. This team has a track record for imposing its will on opponents that don't want to play against them. That tends to be a good way to win baseball games. In last night's rubber match with the Cleveland Indians, you could see all of that again. The Jays plodded, stubbornly, through eight innings. They let the Indians get within two runs and then
