High-performance, fully integrated microcomputer with BIOS, OS,.Shape-determining properties of thin carbon electrodes on plastic foil. A high-resolution scanning probe microscope (SPM) was applied to investigate the structure and shape-determining properties of carbon nanotubes (CNTs) deposited directly on plastic foil. As a template the SPM tip was a pyramidal cone, whereas the CNT growth occurred through a soft molding process. The effect of the process parameters, the surface temperature, and the wettability of the foil, was studied in detail. The following conclusions can be drawn from this study: (i) The walls of the carbon nanotubes (CNTs) consist of a hexagonal diamond structure and form capillary necks, which ensure a good contact with the foil. (ii) The influence of the growth mades. The growth modes. The growth modes of the foil, while the surface are rotated. In both cases a very high number of CNTs is obtained and their growth is ensured by the properties of the projectics o
