In this Episode you will try to solve a supernatural puzzle in the small town of Evergreen, Australia. But you are not alone in solving this mystery, over the years the show has brought you to these isolated villages, and now it's your turn to investigate. In this interactive narrative in VR you will encounter several puzzles and clues as you try to figure out what's happening in this poor town. By the end of this episode, you will be making a video log of your findings for the other viewers of the show. Gameplay: Frankie uses a Oculus Rift to interact with the world. The controller is attached to her hand using a Vive Tracker for tracking. The movement code for the game was written in Unreal Engine, making it easy to use for any VR application. The game also consists of several interaction elements such as audio logs, cameras, doors, and more. All of these will need to be tracked using the Vive Tracker. The game also features two different camera modes, a Stereoscopic Camera and a Looker Camera. Stereoscopic Camera will have a stereoscopic view of the world, where each eye will be looking at a different viewpoint. The Stereoscopic camera's horizontal parallax is calculated by eye-tracking, meaning it will be setup to follow you head movements, so look in any direction, and the game will have the correct looking camera to match where your head is facing. The Looker Camera mode has a flat view of the world, which means it will be a single camera that isn't following your eye movement and therefore will more likely have a flat view of the world. When setting up your Vive Tracker, you can specify three different geometries for the Vive Tracker to use. The default is a plane, which provides a "flat" view of the world, but limits the field of view of the camera behind the Vive Tracker. The Surface geometry allows for more freedom of movement, and is the most realistic that the Vive Tracker can output. The Grip Track allows you to position the Vive Tracker at any arbitrary point in the world as long as it is in front of the vive tracker camera. This is useful for creating interactions such as doors, windows, etc. Audio is provided by the vorpal audio engine which is a on server managed by the audio director. Teleportation: Teleportation is done using a blend of the teleport slider, so you can use the mouse to teleport into specific

What's new in Fantasy Grounds - FG Old World Regional Map Pack:

Of PleasureCindy Marlowe Sally, On last night's reunion special, Edward and Sheila were talking about S&M (or Bondage and Domination, as they called it)... Sally: Oh Edward, if I had known you'd be talking about some of this stuff... I like to be tortured or humiliated, don't ya Edward: I love it when a woman whips me with a belt, or sticks a vibrator down my throat, or slaps me all day long or flogs me Sally: Yeah, but how in the world did you find out about all of this nasty stuff? Edward: People would hand me books. I was fascinated to know all the sexual permutations Sally: Well, I don't think I could take it if Edward started up with this sort of thing... Rosie: I've never been to a "play party" but I might take this up with Ed if I ever go back to New Orleans. 2. The root of all violence. Edward and his people have been getting it on; anything that would help enhance their acts. 3. Gyno. A doctor who specializes in gynecology and the female body. E seems to be looking for a new doctor in New Orleans.He asked where he could find Dr. Anna Duke. 4. An old plantation on Lake Pontchartrain. 5. Nancy's husband. 6. Emotionally disturbed. 7. Enslaved. 8. What sound did the owl make? 9. Jimmy and Bobbo took a taste and said it was wonderful. 10. Is that Stu on there? POINT OF VIEW (V.O.) In the year 2002, a time of amazing discovery for you and your very own self, you were reading the New Orleans Times-Petition and the front page was the story that Jerry Slandry, a violinist, and his partner, April Bordelon, a singer, were playing someplace in New Orleans. The story went on to recount that while they were playing, Robert, the owner, from France, was watching, and Henry. the master of woods and iron,

Don't be worried by all the "ish" in this game: there is no ice-cubes. It's more like a simulation about an event that won't be exactly the same, but surely can be reproduced. You're the leader of a new ideology that must win against the others in order to become the new philosophy. An ideology that becomes power can't just appear out of nowhere; a new kind of man is needed to move things along. We build him, and you as his teacher must help him to grow as a leader. Create a new leader, create followers, reproduce and train them, and your ideology will triumph! But, for a new ideology to be powerful, it must have a good reach, so you'll have to win over the others (through manipulation, propaganda, or even force). There are five different ideologies in this game. There will be three more in the future, but you can play as many as you want for free at this time. The game begins in a year in which you will be in charge. During that time you will need to create, grow and train an ideology that will be able to take over the world; a government that will be able to spread everywhere and get a good reach. How will you do that? If your ideology hasn't reached the right people, it will be defeated or even worse, if it has gone to the wrong people, it will be stamped out or, worst of all, killed. If that happens, the other ideologies will destroy it or take it over. The world will be divided, and the factions will war one against the other! You will need to give power to the leaders and use propaganda to manipulate them and make them more loyal to your ideas. Millions of followers will help your ideology take over the world! It won't be easy! You will have to face many challenges in your mission to shape the world! Don't let your revolution be destroyed! Features: The main features are: Hundreds of thousands of points of view of countries Real data of 175 countries (population density, economy, military power, political regime, and more!) 5 Civilized countries: North America, Europe, Asia, Africa, Oceania Hundreds of Thousands of free countries, new created each time the player completes a game Fifty-five, in some cases six, ideologies in the game
