From The Hill: Donald Trump's campaign could have Hillary Clinton on the ropes in the days after the election, according to one top Republican. Florida Sen. Marco Rubio, one of Trump's closest Senate allies, said he believes the GOP nominee can force Clinton into a "big October surprise." Rubio's prediction, which comes days before Trump's scheduled visit to Florida, is the clearest sign yet that the Republican nominee is intent on taunting Clinton in the swing state even in the weeks before Election Day. It could raise the prospect of the GOP having to once again endure a bitter post-election primary to determine who will be the party's nominee. It also highlights the degree of Trump's ties to his home state and the importance of the state for Republicans as they attempt to retain control of the
