Q: PHP class override method i'm very new on php. I want to do some simple php practice. I have the following classes abstract class Animal { public function speak() { return "I'm an animal!"; } } class Dog extends Animal { public function speak() { return "Woof!"; } } and i try to call the speak method from the Animal class on the Dog class but it returns me the class Dog not the Dog class. How can i override the method in the class Dog? thanks

A: Your code is already working correctly. Do you think something else is in the way? In php, the function defined in the parent class is called on the instance of the class. So: `var_dump(new Animal()->speak());` returns string 'I'm an animal!' Does that answer your question?

Detection of RNA, DNA and protein in single cells by flow cytometry. Herein we describe methods for the simultaneous measurement of RNA, DNA and protein content in single cells using flow cytometry. The three-color staining strategy enables quantification of all three constituents simultaneously on the same cell, in a manner analogous to traditional cytometric methods. Simultaneous measurement of three cell components eliminates the need to mask-to-mask comparisons that are made in cytometric experiments and allows true expression level comparisons to be made for cellular components. Different fixatives and fixation/permeabilization protocols are detailed, and a protocol for simultaneous staining of RNA, DNA and protein in fixed cells is also presented. The methods described here should allow for the construction of multidimensional cytometric data sets that link changes in

Features Key:

For All Ages: All of the game's content is available for free, there is no need to purchase full game to use it. All players will be able to enjoy the single-player part of the game, even if the online component can't be accessed. Players can choose to play with other people, as well, if they wish.

Creativity for All: While you can use already developed class-based classes or wage a war between guilds, players can create their own class using the same system as for the main battles. The only limitation is that they must be an existing class allowed in the game, so be sure to check with your local game store before purchasing.

Role-Playing for All: In the game, players can go through many stories, raid palaces to obtain new weapons and gear, raid dungeons to obtain class-specific skills, and form a guild with other players.

Diversity: The customization of your character alone allows you to play any role without holding any preconceptions of the character, and not just in the actions you can take but also in your appearance. The player-created classes and ensembles also offer numerous possibilities to enhance those attributes.

Custom Content: Players can create their own content: items and maps as well as custom quests, which can be uploaded to the official website. Many items and maps can be pre-made or purchased from the official store.

League of Legends IGN League of Legends is a melee-focused 3v3 action game that combines intense duels with fast-paced team-fights in the middle of a battlefield. It was released on February 19, 2009. The game features a lively, active community, including an active spectatorship community. League of Legends' units are called champions, and they are the stars of the story-driven gameplay of the game. However, its graphics and attention to detail make it quite appealing to modern gamers.[1] Champions : As a champion, your goal is to defeat the enemy team to win the game. There are three main types of champions that are divided into two categories: melee and ranged. Every champion has unique abilities, which makes it hard for the enemy to predict your movements. They also have a unique attack pattern that can be used to defeat your opponents.

Melee Champions : Melee champions are designed to fight head-on, using physical attacks to overcome their opponents. Some champions are melee fighters, while others are slow or use magic. The basic control layout is the same on most platforms. While the relative position of the player's hands on the mouse determines his/her direction, the press of the button indicates the direction of the attack.

Ranged Champions : Ranged champions have special weapons that allow them to strike opponents from a distance. Ranged champions move slowly and are built to deal big damage from far away. The relative position of the player's hands on the mouse determines his/her direction, but the press of the button indicates the direction of the attack.

Champion Combos : Champion combos are special attacks that can be performed by combining certain types of attacks. To perform a champion combo, the champion needs to be in close proximity to an enemy champion. You can use the right mouse button to perform the combo. For example, activating an auto attack will activate your auto attacks and your auto attacks will then become a combination of auto attacks, allowing you to use champion combos.

Glyphs : Glyphs are a simplified way to use abilities. You can use a glyph to activate a new action. You can also use a combination of glyphs to change the effects of
