Is a bad smell a flaw of a car's air-conditioning system? Last summer I came back to my home country and got into a car with a bad smell. The driver of the car (it's not me) told me that it was the fault of the air-conditioning system. As someone who hardly drives, I didn't really believe in it, but it stuck in my mind and I started wondering whether it was true. Is it a defect of the air-conditioning system to have a bad smell? A: In our apartment block they have an air conditioning system where the air gets filtered through a HEPA filter. Obviously the air filters still have dust and dirt particles, so they smell clean. But like someone else said, if it isn't cleaned regularly or if the filter becomes blocked, then that is when you get a bad smell. A: I think the answer varies from car to car and from city to city. Bad smells in cars often result from either 1) the ventilation system which is responsible for supplying fresh air to the interior of the car is faulty OR 2) the filter system is clogged. In the first case, the car will likely smell worse when the fan is running and the doors are open. A very poor ventilation system will also cause you to be greeted by a very humid interior while the engine is running. In the second case, the smells will be far more consistent - whether you're driving in the city or in your hometown. This could be a sign this song in DxGoryMP. (If you know anything about Japanese music, you'll understand what I'm talking about.) This is more of a song for me to listen to at home rather than something you can add to your RPG Maker game, though it would work just fine. As stated above, this song was not included in the actual album, so I decided to re-arrange and re-record it in my DxGoryMP project. It was the first song I did for this pack. I apologize for the length of the song. I think it's a little hard to understand, and I made it as short as I could to make it easier to understand. Please listen to it while you play. In the end, I think you'll find it much easier to understand. Those who know the original will understand what I've done to the music, but those who don't will hopefully still enjoy it. I hope you like it! Please note that this is not the album version. It is, in fact, far better. Please give it a listen for yourself. Just as a final note, this is the same song, but at a different volume. Here is a screenshot of the volume control. Disclaimer: I know nothing about Japanese music. I know nothing about DxGoryMP either. I have only compiled all the songs into one playlist in DxGoryMP, so there's no more audio tagging involved. When I re-recorded this song, I simply used DxGoryMP's composition tools, and then decided to mute everything except the main melody. I'm pretty sure I've changed the arrangement of the original music, though. Listen to the Original Album Version DownloadDxGoryMP: Volume Control: Those who have already played The Calm pack will find this version of the same music a little odd, but it's not so bad. If you don't like it, you can turn it off in DxGoryMP

What's new:

MP3's This is the last compilation from the Mayhem above label, and the very last number to feature me on the cover (although I was a part of the label's plans) - It features 17 bands recording one-offs for a DIY record label. After this number I moved on to play with 'Oh Four Legs!' Records, who were also set up by the same guy. I made no attempt to capture all the releases in one volume, and also many of the bands who appeared did not have a physical release. But this is a fun way to both sample a lot of anarcho-folk-eclectic-everything else, and just that, without any need to read each and every one of the releases. As you've probably guessed, over half of these feature solo recordings, so if you'd like to know who each of them is, check the bands pages. - Ed. A surprise entry for the cover track is the cover of The Lavender Hawaii. A Leningrad-based musician who had recorded a lot of punk covers of songs by tracks from between 'She's Got Furs', 'The Clockwork Shift' and 'The Split' compilations, before creating 'Dirty Days' & 'Keep Smiling'. Picking up a borrowed drum kit, Gennady 'Gerry' Naumenko joined forces with Norwegian artists Tania Eriksen, Alice Kaminski and Chris Bull. These recordings eventually found their way onto vinyl (callin-themselves Oben Raisen), and have been re-issued on CD once - lucky for us. I've chosen to give you the 'Dirty Days' version of The Lavender Hawaii, as it most closely reflects the original artists intention behind the project. - Ed. I never did manage to interview

'The Laundromat & The Bathroom' after their 'Greetings From The Industrial Genocide Movement In Svalbard' EP was released (not that it's a bad thing), so I've snuck this one in as a secret - All I know about the band is that they are a Russian trio; not much else; but you'd have to admit, it was a slightly odd look and sound - Did that ever make you blurt the Buttons & Hazard & Julie's Eyes x 3 that out? - Ed. There is another Australian, more in tune with the 27 tempos, which is that of Lavender Hawaii. 'Flirt' was recorded as a favour for his best
