Overview

Tactics 2: War is a Game of cat and mouse set in a Stalin era Russia where humans struggle against a mysterious, remote, and invincible force. To defeat them we must combine our military and scientific knowledge with our tactical knowledge to move, assault, and retreat across a series of asymmetric battles taking place in highly strategic locations. You have a highly detailed military command room where you move your units from battle to battle. There are also several base building screens that give players access to researching new units, upgrading units, building technology for new and repaired units, and manage your funds. This Command Room also gives you access to an in-game database that gives you the ability to search for new units, research new technology, research new weapons, manage your credits, and view your custom battlefield maps.

Use your mouse to move your units. Click your mouse for units to move, double click to target an enemy unit. Because a mouse is a device, you know that haptic feedback is available. Default settings are as follows:

bird Playing Wings & featuring Zergy's, Fumi's, and Devon's turns T/N: h/t to YZDxTurgone's tips on using Psy, as explained on wargamer's forum Helping me out tonight is another Warbird crew member, YZDxTurgone. He will be helping us review Zergy's excellent w/copter/air battles. No bias with this one. What does Zergy's video contain? First off, Zergy's summary video: The sound department in Starcraft II is really great. You can hear the weapons of the units, the presence of nearby units and hearing them go out. At the end of the above video Zergy explains a bit about his thought process for these maps. For the first map, he wanted to make it a scenario where everyone has to play a lot more cautiously as much as the whole thing is on a quick timer. He settled on a xel'naga temple. For the second map it was a station and for the third map it was a large gas collector. For the next map he is introducing some mechanics inspired by Terran artillery units. This next map is a factory. You can see the factory taken by a Terran and defended by a Zerg. Below is a screenshot of the first maps with the map IDs listed: Xel'naga Caverns Lair of the Whetling Wormhole Distribution Center Xel'naga Caverns Xel'naga Caverns The primary idea behind the Xel'naga Caverns being sort of a map where you have to try to fend off attacks. The idea is that each player wants to clear out a section to expand into an area from which they can attack anyone who's on their side of the planet. On the other hand, anyone who holds onto a section could hold out. You're getting close to the hive area of two terran units, which has an advantage, but this time you're on the defense. On defense in this game is weaker, though, than on offense. Because you have to defend people with units, you have to react to the presence of nearby units. If you don't react fast enough you could lose your units for nothing. In order to move around on this map we use a tornado that will let us move around quickly until a
