What's new in Zombie Killer - Type To Shoot!:

The Age of Navigation is the first major novel written in English by Argentine writer Julio Cortázar. It was originally written in Spanish as Historia de la motriza (Story of the Globetrotter) and was published as Historia de la motriza in English in 1974, as a Mexican literary journal's prize-winning story. The original novel is the prologue to the novella The Absent Traveller, and is notably the first work of science fiction to include the concept of time travel. Plot "Traveller" takes place in the historic period of the late nineteenth century and early twentieth century, in the city of Buenos Aires, between 1896, when Martín Fierro was written, and 1914, when the book was published. The main character of the story, Hilario Durán, is a student and country doctor who is the son of wealthy parents, and the younger brother of a well known novelist and journalist. The story begins in 1895 when they receive their first telegram, showing that a friend of the brother's is desperately ill. The family immediately loads their belongings into a horse-drawn carriage, and starts on the 300 kilometers to the friend's home in Algorta Province. Two days later the friend dies. Hilario is sat in a rocking chair as he listens to a radio-filled room - typically, the part of the room that contains more modern electronic devices than the rest of the dwelling. In the room, a young man sits next to Hilario, who is about to die of tuberculosis. She is called the "G-String" because of the bandage that is wrapped several times on the girl's lower back. She is the only person in the room who radiates a relatively positive light even after the death of the friend. The stranger tries to reach their relatives and leaves shortly before the arrival of a telegram sent by the brother. It reads: "Nice to know you. After the trip I'll be ready to travel again to see the world. I'll see you soon." With this telegram the passenger falls off the chair of the G-string, leaving it empty. Hilario then begins asking questions, one after another, but he receives no answer. However, slowly, he starts to receive answers. He learns that in reality the "stranger" was the absent man, a person who disappeared without having revealed the fate of his disease in the past. He was called
