***All the programs in the Aperture, Photoshop, and Lightroom families share many core features.*** If you're already familiar with the different tools in Photoshop, then you should find it a bit easier to use the other programs in the Aperture family. ***Aperture.*** The native camera application for Macs. ***Aperture Elements.*** Another option for Macs, it works like a stripped-down version of Aperture. ***Lightroom.*** The ultimate photo management software, Lightroom is the premiere photo-management program. ***Photoshop.*** Photoshop was originally developed by Adobe for the Windows platform, but it's also available for Macs. ## Aperture Aperture is an application that comes with Apple's iPhoto. It enables you to shoot, edit, organize, and preview your images, as well as share them online. If you're familiar with iPhoto, then you can easily adjust settings and apply changes as you shoot with your iSight camera. Aperture's editing tools are similar to those found in Adobe's Photoshop and Lightroom. It enables you to view and work on your images in two ways: ***Photo Book Mode.*** Tap the 3 dots in the bottom-right corner of the window to display a small list of options. From this list, choose Photo Book Mode, as shown on the left in Figure 4-2. After you activate Photo Book Mode, the information page shown at right changes to show a more similar view to Photoshop's Layers panel. Figure 4-2: Use Photo Book Mode to view layers as a series of frames, similar to those found in Photoshop. ***View/Edit View Options.*** Tap the third-from-the-left tab (the one with the options wheel) to display the View/Edit View Options area, as shown on the right in Figure 4-2. Choose which view you want to use by using the first three options: Selection, Grid, and Zoom. (You'll learn more about using the view options later in this chapter.) You can also change which of the eight tabs displays by tapping the first tab. (You can display only a subset of the tabs that are visible by tapping the first tab again.) ***Photo Editing.*** After you have your images organized by date in the Organizer and then onto specific folders on your hard drive,

Questions or Comments? Tax and Budget Considerations On May 23, 2018, the I.R.S. issued Notice 2018-10, which provides guidance on how to calculate the federal income tax for certain non-resident aliens (i.e., "foreign-earned income") on certain types of income, including dividends. As in the past, the primary way that U.S. taxpayers deduct federal income tax is through the itemized deductions for foreign taxes paid. Based on Notice 2018-10, certain investment and financial institutions (or their payment processors or proxies) are being required to adjust pricing of dividends and ETFs (exchange-traded funds) and certain other tax-related items to ensure that foreign-earned income of foreign-based taxpayers are appropriately treated as itemized deductions. The impact of the regulation is also resulting in a revenue reduction of $10 billion or more this year for 2018, with more to come. The following chart illustrates how the foreign-earned income, as calculated on the tax return, may affect the reported taxable income and the total tax due. Notice 2018-10 provides a complex calculation to determine whether a particular amount will be deductible (total tax due on foreign earned income subtracted from the reported taxable income will be zero or less). For example, one of the calculators that we use has been updated to provide a "partial deduction" of $1,000 (instead of zero) of foreign earned income from taxable income for the 2019 tax year. We want to make sure that you understand that, under Notice 2018-10, the foreign earned income of U.S. taxpayers will no longer be subject to itemized deductions. For certain taxpayers, who are deemed to be treated as non-residents, the foreign tax will not be deductible. If you have questions or concerns about how you might be affected by the 2018 Notice, please contact us or our affiliate. Analytical techniques are important in biotechnological

Dry cleaners increase the risk of contracting an infection when they use a system known as machine-assisted gravity drainage, or MAGD, to remove the dirty water from the basement, masonry walls and foundation. The machine uses a high-pressure hose to suction water from the basement. It then recirculates the water, and sends it up a pipe to the house's condensation system. "If you're a dry cleaner and you're dry cleaning on the machine, you're going to get that fecal and vaginal matter picked up," she said. The most common infection is from the laundry detergent and other chemicals used in the cleaning, she said. The number of vaginal yeast infections has gone up in the last decade, said Dr. Rachel Cortez, an assistant professor of obstetrics, gynecology and reproductive biology at Rush University Medical Center. The rise is likely due to the increased use of antibiotics, she said, which can be used to treat yeast infections. "It's been difficult to say whether it's up or down," Cortez said, adding that this increase may be one of the few things to show up in the most recent reports. The rates have been consistent for decades, she said. The CleanThing, a yeast infection prevention device that uses a dryer to blast heat and kill the germ that causes yeast, was recently FDA-approved. "The dirty laundry is dirty stuff. It's right there in your laundry. It's the most obvious thing," Cortez said. She said a change in the type of water used in washing machines and increased infections have been linked to a higher use of chemicals. Dry cleaning services likely don't care if they take a risk to families with more than 100 infections every year, she said. "I don't think they're necessarily prioritizing it and they're not going to take the time to review it," she said. "It doesn't seem like they're all that concerned about the extra cost to the business." Gerald Watts, a policy analyst at the National Safety Council, said the dry cleaner industry has been a low priority for agencies like the FDA, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and state health departments. The cost savings and
