It's not covered (it's a 1973?), and I'm not sure what's inside, but it's clean. I used to own one. I'd get it for dirt cheap, but I sold it. That was a good episode. That was the time when they started the series. We had a subscription to the radio station, and my dad tuned it in and got me hooked. That's the episode where the satellite went missing, and everyone knows what happens next. Ever since then, the world has been in the constant search for any good news on the satellite. Where was that last thing I said? The world is crawling at the feet of the satellite, and hopes, that it will locate it in time. This is one of the few that actually knows where it is, a secret agent. He, along with his flunkies, are now trying to figure out what to do. I like the series. The Simpsons are better, but I think this has a higher fun factor. This show 6d1f23a050
